

Do I need to provide you with a photo ID to apostille or authenticate my documents at the State Department?

No.

The United States Department of State does not require any type of photo identification to be able to federal apostille or authenticate personal, business, or corporate documents.